gether in the rotunda of one of the big "We are not running around looking for jobs at menting jewelry," said a salesman in a large Chestnut street with joy when such jobs come in to us ansolicited. You wouldn't believe it, possibly, but we are not fond of assuming charge of snything to be mended unless it comes from a well known customer. The greatest trouble is due to a watch or a ring to a certain store to be fixed and neglect to remember the other day a man came as here and asked all kinds of names and threatened to bring suit against us. Well, I simply had to do the usual detective business and trace that lost cuff button, I put on-my hat while the man was wrangling with the head of the firm and started up Chestnut 'street, making inquiries in all the jewelry stores. I finally found the old caff button three blocks away in a store that didn't look at all like ours. When I told the man where his button was be wouldn't believe me. "Utterly impossible!" he said. How ever, he went out, and we haven't seen him since. That's one case out of many. "-Philadelphia Record.

A Seasoned Fisherman. Friend Barnett is a wonderful fisherman," remarked Superintendent Curran of the New Orleans and Northeastern railway, recently, speaking of the general freight and passenger agent of
